U.S. forces step up search for pro-Saddam insurgents

SAMARRA, IRAQ | U.S. troops blasted down the gates of homes and smashed in doors of workshops and junkyards in a massive raid Wednesday to hunt for pro-Saddam Hussein militants and stamp out the increasingly bold anti-U.S. resistance.

The raid targeted the city of Samarra, north of Baghdad, where U.S. officials say some 1,500 fighters operate — making it one of the persistent hotspots in the so-called "Sunni Triangle."

The coalition scored a major victory Saturday by nabbing Saddam, who Iraqi officials revealed Wednesday was being held in the Baghdad area. But violence has continued in the capital and in predominantly Sunni areas west and north of Baghdad, once Saddam's power base.

In the Samarra raid by some 2,500 troops, the 4th Infantry Division and Iraqi forces detained at least a dozen suspected guerrillas — though others got away, apparently tipped off about the raid.

With Saddam in custody, the most wanted Iraqi fugitive is Izzat Ibrahim al-Douri, a high-ranking member of the former regime thought to be organizing anti-U.S. attacks. But it was unclear whether U.S. officials think al-Douri is in the Samarra area. ALEKSANDAR VASOVIC (AP)

Hinckley Granted Unsupervised Trips

WASHINGTON | A federal judge ruled Wednesday that the man who shot President Reagan may visit his parents without staff from the mental hospital where he has lived for more than two decades.

U.S. District Judge Paul L. Friedman granted John Hinckley Jr.'s request over the objections of the Reagan family and the federal government. However, he attached strict conditions and rejected Hinckley's request to travel to his parents' home in Williamsburg, Va.

Hinckley, 48, was acquitted in 1982 by reason of insanity in the shootings of Reagan, press secretary James Brady and two law enforcement officers. Hinckley said he shot Reagan to impress actress Jodie Foster. (AP)

Panda Pride

He looks a little sheepish now, but this panda's got the soul of a rocker — or at least a name created by one. The San Diego Zoo unveiled the name of its newest giant panda cub after much fanfare on Tuesday. The name, Mei Sheng, translates to "Born in the USA," after the Bruce Springsteen tune. The 4-month-old cub's name had been a closely held secret, according to Reuters. Mei Sheng is the second giant panda cub born at the San Diego Zoo and the first in the Western Hemisphere since 1999.

TRAVEL

A Stimulating Vacation

If you're young, healthy and, above all, virile, you could have a trip to Australia in your future. Men at the University of Calgary in Canada are being offered a free two-week Australian getaway — in exchange for their sperm. The Reproductive Medicine Clinic in Aubury, Australia, started the program after a law was enacted saying sperm donors can no longer remain anonymous, the Canadian Press reports. The clinic will cover the donors' plane fare, accommodations and travel expenses as an incentive. The imported donors can't have their identities shielded either, but would have no legal responsibilities for any children, the CP says. Clinic officials say they've had 15 inquiries so far. One choosy mom didn't choose Jif. But when Mary Rickard of Martinsburg, W.Va., opened a can labeled Maxwell House coffee Tuesday, the container was full of creamy peanut butter instead. Her son examined the 34.5-ounce coffee container and found a 4-pound Jif jar wedged inside the otherwise empty coffee can. Officials of both Jif and Kraft Foods, which owns the Maxwell House brand, are investigating the mix-up. Kraft does not manufacture any brands of peanut butter. Jif produces peanut butter only in Lexington, Ky., and Kraft has no operations center in that city. (AP)

George Ryan of Illinois charged with taking payoffs for contracts

CHICAGO | Former Illinois Gov. George Ryan was indicted Wednesday on federal charges of taking payoffs, gifts and vacations in return for government contracts and leases while he was governor and secretary of state.

Ryan, 69, a Republican known worldwide as a leading critic of the death penalty, gradually became the focus of a corruption investigation that began even before his 1998 election as governor. The scandal was a factor in his 2001 decision not to seek a second term.

Ryan, who served as secretary of state from 1991 to 1999, has said he knew there was a culture of corruption in the secretary of state's office but was unaware of the specifics.

The indictment alleges that for more than a decade Ryan let his friends wield great influence in state government and profit from his positions as secretary of state and governor. Ryan allegedly allowed some of his friends, who were not state employees, to steer state contracts in return for bribes and gave others insider information that they could profit from, while ignoring complaints of wrongdoing.

In return, the indictment alleges, Ryan and his family received illegal cash payments, gifts, vacations and personal services from his friends and associates. The indictment did not list a dollar figure for Ryan, but said members of his family got cash loans and gifts totaling $167,000.

Timothy Rooney, a partner of Ryan defense attorney Dan K. Webb, said there would be no immediate comment but that a statement would be released. MIKE ROBINSON (AP)

Democrats' Campaign Brawl Hits N.H. Airwaves

WASHINGTON | The political ad wars intensified as three Democratic presidential candidates launched commercials in New Hampshire this week and debate simmered over an ad that uses Osama bin Laden to criticize front-runner Howard Dean.

In 30-second ads, Joe Lieberman claims his record shows he has integrity, John Edwards showcases his plan to crack down on corporations and Wesley Clark says he has the strategy for success in Iraq — echoing themes each has embraced on the campaign trail.

The three candidates are competing in the Granite State's Jan. 27 primary. In all, the Democratic presidential candidates have spent more than $3 million on advertising aimed to reach New Hampshire voters.

A New Hampshire poll released Wednesday by television stations WMUR in Manchester and WCVB in Boston shows Dean having the support of 46 percent of likely voters and Sen. John Kerry with 17 percent. Clark, Lieberman and Edwards trailed them. LIZ SIDOTI (AP)

Church Mortgages Buildings to Pay Abuse Settlements

BOSTON | The sex scandal in the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston has shaken the church almost literally to its foundations.

To help pay the $85 million settlement reached with more than 500 victims of child-molesting priests, the archdiocese has mortgaged its very seat of power — the Cathedral of the Holy Cross — and is putting up for sale the archbishop's residence, a mansion that was a symbol of the church's grandeur and authority. Dozens of churches are also expected to be closed in a move at least accelerated by the scandal.

Some of these steps were almost unthinkable just a year ago, when Cardinal Bernard Law was in charge. The archdiocese resisted selling property to settle abuse claims before Law finally resigned as archbishop amid fierce criticism of his handling of the sex allegations. (AP)

U.S. Inks Free Trade Deal

Plan will ease flow of goods with 4 Central American countries

WASHINGTON | Overcoming a last-minute snag on textiles, the United States reached a free trade agreement on Wednesday with four Central American countries.

Negotiators reached agreement in all areas, including textiles and agriculture, U.S. Trade Representative Robert Zoellick announced at a news conference with the trade ministers of Guatemala, El Salvador, Nicaragua and Honduras.

A fifth nation, Costa Rica, abruptly left the talks on Tuesday complaining about excessive demands being made by the United States for the nation to open up its market to foreign competition in telecommunications and insurance.

However, U.S. officials expressed hope that the differences with Costa Rica can be resolved so that it will be included when the administration submits the Central American Free Trade Agreement, or CAFTA, to Congress early next year.

The free trade deal covering Central America has stirred strong opposition among U.S. sugar cane and sugar beet farmers, who fear competition from lower-priced Central American sugar, and from the U.S. textile industry, which is concerned that the deal will open the beleaguered industry to even more foreign competition.

The deal will phase out virtually all trade barriers among the participating countries over the next decade. MARTIN CRUTSINGER (AP)

U.S. Women Having Kids At Later Age

ATLANTA | The average age at which American women are having their first child has climbed to an all-time high of 25.1, the government said Wednesday.

The rise reflects a drop in teen births and an increase in the number of women who are putting off motherhood until their 30s and 40s.

The age of first-time American moms has risen steadily during the past three decades, from an average of 21.4 in 1970. The latest figure, for 2002, was released by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The government attributed the drop in the teen birth rate to health campaigns that discourage teen pregnancies and promote abstinence. DANIEL YEE (AP)

Iraqis Mull Saddam's Trial

Governing Council debates how to select judges

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Amid concerns of international human rights groups, Iraq's U.S.-appointed Governing Council met for the first time to look into ways of appointing judges to a new war crimes tribunal that could try Saddam Hussein.

A committee of highly qualified lawyers could recommend candidates to be judges on the tribunal, which will try former members of Saddam's regime for human rights abuses stretching back decades, said Mouwafak al-Rubaie, a Shiite physician and longtime human rights activist who serves on the council.

Saddam was captured on Saturday, and some Governing Council members say they want to try him within months. However, he is in U.S. custody and the timeline and format of a possible trial has yet to be established.

U.S. Believes Insurgency Is Centrally Planned

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | The Iraqi insurgency is showing signs of central planning by former officials of Saddam Hussein's regime — figures who coordinate strikes hundreds of miles apart and provide cash and bomb-making expertise to guerrilla cells, a senior U.S. military official said Wednesday.

In some cases, "signature bombs" are used, devices so similar their design suggests they came from the same source, the official said.

Central coordination can also be seen in the anti-U.S. or pro-Saddam demonstrations that crop up simultaneously in cities across the country, the official said.

The shadowy overseers of the insurgency maintain communications with cells made up of a core of about 5,000 anti-U.S. guerrillas, who, in turn, have recruited thousands of part-time fighters from Iraq's mosques and its vast pool of unemployed and angry citizens, the official said.

The senior official said intelligence analysts are hoping to use documents seized during Saturday's capture of Saddam Hussein "to get better clarity" about the guerrilla movement. JIM KRANE (AP)

Grievances Aired on Third Day Of Afghan Constitutional Council

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN | Afghanistan's constitutional council erupted in chaos Wednesday, with one delegate denouncing her colleagues as "criminals" and others threatening to walk out.

The constitutional council is being billed as an opportunity to shape a new and democratic system for this war-ravaged land. It is also a powder-keg of factionalism.

The council's morning session began with a scathing speech by Malalai Joya, a female delegate, who decried the positions of influence given to faction leaders.

"Why have you again selected as committee chairmen those criminals who have brought these disasters for the Afghan people?" shouted an angry Joya.

Other delegates accused the government of trying to force them to accept a presidential system, which they say could give too much power to U.S.-backed President Hamid Karzai. Several threatened a walk-out over the issue. PAUL HAVEN (AP)

Battle Over Secularism In France

Chirac wants to ban all religious symbols from public schools

PARIS | Despite protests from religious leaders, France must outlaw Islamic head coverings, Jewish skullcaps and other obvious religious signs in schools and regulate them in the workplace, President Jacques Chirac announced Wednesday.

Such action, the French president said in a televised national address, is needed to reaffirm France's secular foundations. He rejected the model of integration where ethnic communities guard their customs and separateness.

"I refuse to let France take that path. It would sacrifice its heritage. It would compromise its future. It would lose its soul," Chirac said.

Chirac called on parliament, where his conservative government has a majority, to pass a law banning such religious signs ahead of the school year that starts in September 2004.

Less expected than his proposed law governing schools — and possibly more contentious because of its potential scope — was Chirac's proposal for the workplace.

Business leaders should be allowed to "regulate the wearing of religious signs" for safety reasons and for dealing with clients, Chirac said. JOHN LEICESTER (AP)

Elsewhere in Kabul on Wednesday, Canadian soldiers handed out nearly 2,000 Christmas boxes for Afghan children to take back to their refugee camp in the city.

Sharon's New Tack Splits Party

Likud divided over prospect of taking unilateral action

JERUSALEM | A day before a major policy address by Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, his ruling party appeared bitterly divided Wednesday over proposals that Israel withdraw from parts of the West Bank and Gaza even without negotiating with the Palestinians.

Sharon has spoken in recent weeks of taking unspecified unilateral action if peace efforts fail. Officials have said his proposals could include withdrawing from parts of the West Bank and Gaza and exiting Jewish settlements in the areas evacuated.

This talk has set off an impassioned debate within the Likud Party, which historically has been committed to Jewish control over the biblical land of Israel, an area that includes the West Bank. It has also upset the Palestinians and the United States, who both say that a peace settlement must be reached through negotiations.

Orgy Organizers Sentenced

2 get life in case that roiled China-Japan relations

BEIJING | A Chinese court sentenced a hotel worker and a prostitute to life in prison on Wednesday for organizing a three-day sex party for Japanese tourists — a case that outraged Chinese and reignited anger over Japan's war-time conduct.

Twelve other people were sentenced to up to 15 years in prison, and China said it had issued arrest warrants for three Japanese accused of organizing the event.

According to earlier Chinese reports, the incident involved as many as 400 Japanese men and 500 Chinese prostitutes at a hotel in the southern city of Zhuhai.

Its final day fell on Sept. 18, the anniversary of a Japanese attack in 1931 on a city in China's north-east that Chinese regard as the start of World War II. The timing, which appeared to be coincidental, angered Chinese, many of whom believe Japan hasn't atoned for wartime brutality — including mass rapes.

Beijing's pursuit of the Japanese suspects threatened to complicate the countries' relations further. There is no extradition treaty in place between Japan and China, and a Justice Ministry official in Tokyo said Japanese law doesn't allow the government to turn over any citizen to a country without one.

The trial began Friday and ended Saturday amid tight security in the Zhuhai Intermediate Court. JOE McDONALD (AP)

Bosnia to Pay U.S. Detainees' Families

SARAJEVO, BOSNIA-HERZEGOVINA | The Bosnian government said Wednesday it would pay $19,000 to the families of six Algerian citizens who were handed over to the United States as terrorist suspects.

The men are still being held at a U.S. prison camp in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. They were arrested by Bosnian police in October 2001, suspected of having ties to al Qaeda and making threats to the U.S. and British embassies in Bosnia.

The threats could not be proven in Bosnian courts, but the men continued to be held in prison. Their lawyers appealed to Bosnia's top human rights court. On Jan. 17, 2002, hours before the Human Rights Chamber was to order their release for lack of evidence, police handed over the men to U.S. authorities. (AP)

Va. Budget Holds $2.4B Increase

RICHMOND, VA. | Gov. Mark R. Warner introduced a new state budget Wednesday that includes nearly $2.4 billion in new spending requirements, largely for education, health services and transportation.

The provides $760 million in additional money for public schools and $144 million more for higher education, $870 million more for health services such as Medicaid and $392 million more for transportation.

It ends three years of drawdowns of the state's "rainy-day" fund and begins replenishing the fund in 2006 with the deposit of $87 million, a critical step if Virginia is to retain its optimal "AAA" credit rating — a stamp of fiscal fitness the state has never lost.

Warner's budget for the two years that begin July 1 is based on revenue projections and tax reforms that he made public last month, including a 1-cent increase in the state sales tax and offsetting reductions in income taxes and the tax on food.

Warner also said his budget provides nearly $104 million to boost pay for public employees, school teachers and local government workers whose salaries are subsidized by the state.

Girl Shot On D.C. Street

WASHINGTON | Police were searching for the gunman who shot and wounded a six-year-old girl Wednesday, as she walked down a Southeast Washington street. A man was also shot and killed.

"There was a woman who was walking two children down C Street. One of those children, a six-year-old female, was struck in the abdomen from a stray bullet," said District of Columbia Metropolitan Police Chief Charles H. Ramsey.

The girl suffered entry and exit wounds. She was taken to Children's National Medical Center for surgery, and was later in critical but stable condition.

Near where the girl was found, police also found a man who had been shot. Police said Jovani Jefferson, 22, died later at Washington Hospital Center.

The chief said that the man may recently have been released from jail, but it remained unclear whether his incarceration has anything to do with the shooting. DERRILL HOLLY (AP)

Malvo Jury to Continue Deliberations

CHESAPEAKE, VA. | Jurors reached no verdict Wednesday during a full day of deliberations in the capital murder trial of sniper suspect Lee Boyd Malvo.

The jury was to resume deliberations at 9 a.m. Thursday.

The jurors asked several questions at the end of the day, including a request to again see the Chevrolet Caprice that Malvo and Muhammad allegedly used during last year's deadly shooting spree in the Washington, D.C., area. Circuit Judge Jane Marum Roush denied the request, saying "we really don't want the jurors pawing through" the car.

The jury also asked for help with the definition of malice, a necessary element to a murder conviction. (AP)

Decades-Old Suit Could Be Near End

WASHINGTON | The attorney in a decades-old class action lawsuit over the treatment of the mentally ill in the District said Wednesday the suit could end in a year if the city continues to reform its services.

"The District was about 20 years behind and now it's caught up," said Peter Nickles. The suit was filed in 1974 on behalf of more than 10,000 people "warehoused" at St. Elizabeths Hospital, Nickles said. It contends individuals are entitled to the "least restrictive setting" for the treatment of mental illness.

He said a judge recently approved a set of 15 performance measures that, if met, would end the suit. (EXPRESS)

NYSE to Split Top Job, Shift Board

Exchange responds to pay scandal, lawsuit with new concessions

WASHINGTON | Federal regulators, responding to a scandal at the New York Stock Exchange, approved an overhaul Wednesday after the exchange agreed to split its top executive position to avoid massing too much power in one person.

The Securities and Exchange Commission voted 5-0 to approve the overhaul plan proposed by the exchange's interim chairman, John Reed, and endorsed last month by 98 percent of the exchange's members. The plan will establish a smaller and more independent board of directors to oversee regulation of the exchange and appointment of an autonomous regulatory officer.

The nation's largest stock exchange is emerging from controversy that arose in September over its chairman's pay and power.

On Tuesday, the nation's largest public pension fund, the $154 billion California Public Employees Retirement System, announced it was filing a class-action lawsuit against the NYSE and seven trading firms, alleging that fraudulent practices cost the system millions of dollars.

CalPERS and other public pension funds have insisted that the proposed NYSE reforms aren't enough to restore investors' trust, shaken by revelations of the $188 million pay package of former chairman Dick Grasso. MARCY GORDON (AP)

Best Buy Outpaces Rival Circuit City

NEW YORK | The outlook for the holiday season appears murky, as the nation's two biggest consumer electronics chains offered mixed third-quarter results on Wednesday.

Best Buy said earnings more than doubled in the third quarter on strong sales of notebook computers, flat-panel televisions and digital cameras and camcorders, matching projections.

Meanwhile, rival Circuit City swung to a profit for its third quarter even as sales fell slightly. However, when excluding results from its bank card operations, its results came in below expectations.

Experts said Best Buy continues to gain despite the success of Wal-Mart and other discounters. (AP)

Oil Prices Surge Ahead

Crude futures prices surged Wednesday, leaping to heights not seen since just before the U.S.-led war in Iraq, as government inventory data revealed oil inventories had again dwindled to the lowest level ever recorded in December. January light, sweet crude futures on the New York Mercantile Exchange settled 46 cents higher at $33.35 a barrel — a front-month high not seen since March 17, when prices reached $36.40 a barrel. Crude stocks are now hovering just above the crucial 270-million-barrel guidepost the National Petroleum Council issued as an indicator of low oil supplies. (AP)

Travel Site Orbitz Trades Heavily on Opening Day

Orbitz Inc. made a roller-coaster debut as a publicly traded company Wednesday — its shares initially surging 18 percent before finishing the day below their initial public offering price in heavy volume that underscored investors' revived interest in IPOs. The four-year-old Internet travel company, backed by the five biggest U.S. airlines, raised nearly $100 million from the IPO as it takes aim at its two larger competitors in the growing business: Expedia and Travelocity. The company's stock, priced at $26 per share Tuesday, jumped quickly to $30.75 before tumbling to close at $24.98. (AP)

Hall-of-Fame QB Graham Dies From Heart Condition

PRO FOOTBALL | Otto Graham, the Hall of Fame quarterback who led the Cleveland Browns to a championship game in every season he played, has died. He was 82.

Graham died in Sarasota, Florida, team spokesman Todd Stewart said Wednesday. He was taken to Sarasota Memorial Hospital earlier in the day with the same heart condition that killed actor John Ritter, said his son, Duey Graham.

Nicknamed "Automatic Otto," Graham never missed a game as a pro while passing for 23,584 yards and 174 touchdowns. He finished his career with an astounding 105-17-4 regular-season record. (AP)

Coach will remain in charge of Giants for last 2 games of season

PRO FOOTBALL | Coach Jim Fassel was fired by the New York Giants after a disappointing season that began with hopes of reaching the Super Bowl.

"It's time. They need a change, I need a change. It's the right thing to do," Fassel said Wednesday.

He will coach the last two games of the season. Fassel had a year left on his contract at a salary of about $2.5 million.

Fassel was told of the decision Tuesday in a meeting he requested with Giants co-owners Wellington Mara and Bob Tisch and executive vice president John Mara.

A Super Bowl team three seasons ago and expected to contend again, the Giants (4-10) have dropped six straight games to fall to last place in the NFC East. It's the team's longest losing streak in 10 years.

coach, Fassel is 60-54-1, including the postseason. Among the possible successors to Fassel are Louisiana State University coach Nick Saban, former Jaguars coach Tom Coughlin and the Patriots' two coordinators: Romeo Crennel and Charlie Weis. Blockbuster Trade Dealt Setback

Boston's plan for Rodriguez's contract rejected

PRO BASEBALL | The baseball players' union rejected Boston's proposed changes to Alex Rodriguez's contract Wednesday, jeopardizing trade talks between the Red Sox and Rangers.

Rodriguez and Boston general manager Theo Epstein spent the day meeting with Scott Boras, the shortstop's agent, and Gene Orza, the union's No. 2 official.

Still, the trade is not dead yet. Boras expects the parties to meet again Thursday, and Texas owner Tom Hicks set a Thursday evening deadline for an agreement that would send Rodriguez to Boston for Manny Ramirez in a swap of baseball's highest-paid players.

"The dialogue is continuing," Boras said. Should the trade happen, Boston will likely trade shortstop Nomar Graciarra.

Rodriguez has completed three seasons of his record $252 million, 10-year contract and Ramirez has finished three seasons of his $160 million, eight-year deal.

Boston wants Rodriguez to rework his contract, but baseball's collective bargaining agreement says deals can be reworked only to add benefits for players.

"We did suggest an offer the club could make to Alex," Orza said. "As was its right, the club chose not to make it." Orza and Boras wouldn't detail Boston's proposal. Rodriguez's contract has $179 million remaining on it.

"The principle involved is a transcendent one, affecting all of Alex's fellow players," Orza said. "To his credit, Alex, from the outset, recognized this." RONALD BLUM (AP)

Clarett Cleared in Ohio State Probe

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Ohio State investigators found no evidence of academic misconduct by suspended star tailback Maurice Clarett or other athletes.

University president Karen Holbrook said Wednesday that a committee did not discover any instances of athletes receiving inappropriate help from tutors or preferential treatment by professors.

Holbrook said federal privacy laws prevent the university from revealing information about specific students.

A committee was formed to review athletes' academic performances after The New York Times reported in July that Clarett passed a class in 2002 by taking two oral exams.

Clarett, who led the Buckeyes to a national title last season, was suspended this year for accepting money from a family friend and lying about it to investigators.

Chemistry professor Matthew Platz, who led the school's investigation, said the NCAA reviewed the committee's report and indicated it will not take action. (AP)

Coles Has Stress Fracture in Foot

PRO FOOTBALL | Washington Redskins receiver Laveranues Coles said Wednesday he has played nearly the entire season with a stress fracture in his foot.

The injury, which has bothered Coles since September, has made it painful to run routes, but it hasn't stopped him from being one of the team's most valuable assets in a dismal year. Coles leads the Redskins (5-9) with 69 catches for 1,023 yards.

"I tried to keep it under wraps," Coles said. "Because as a football player, I feel there should be no excuses."

Coles will play the final two games, but said he will have to wear a cast for four to eight weeks once the season is over. If the foot hasn't healed by then, he might have surgery.

Coles has missed several practices in recent weeks, with coach Steve Spurrier referring to the injury as a "turf toe."

Laveranues Coles may need surgery.

Coles hasn't missed a game, but his production has declined in recent weeks. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Ravens Try to Prevent A Repeat of Last Season

PRO FOOTBALL | A year ago, the Baltimore Ravens' playoff hopes hinged upon beating Cleveland and Pittsburgh in their final two games. Baltimore lost twice and finished 7-9.

The Ravens face the same scenario this year, with one significant difference: They're better equipped to handle the task. "You would hope so," coach Brian Billick said Wednesday. "We have more experience, having been down this road before."

Fielding one of the youngest teams in NFL history, Billick last year kept Baltimore in the playoff hunt until the final two games — a 14-13 loss at home against Cleveland and a 34-31 defeat at Pittsburgh.

That Ravens team had Jeff Blake at quarterback and Bernardo Harris at middle linebacker in place of the injured Ray Lewis.

Anthony Wright is now the start-

Brian Billick's Ravens are tied for first place in the AFC North with the Bengals.

ing quarterback, Lewis is playing like an MVP and the rookies are accustomed to life in the NFL. So as the Ravens (8-6) prepare for Sunday's game in Cleveland and peek ahead toward the finale against Pittsburgh, they believe they're better prepared for the stretch run. DAVID GINSBURG (AP)

Spurrier Promises Changes in 2004

PRO FOOTBALL | Washington Redskins coach Steve Spurrier is promising changes for next season. The specifics will have to wait until this one is done.

Spurrier sought Wednesday to quell reports he is considering changes to his coaching staff. Otherwise, it appears a different look is in store for Spurrier's third year.

"I've never mentioned anything about changing coaches," Spurrier said. "All I've said is we've got to do something different around here. We've got to restructure, reorganize, regroup, whatever you want to call it."

Spurrier did not elaborate on what

Steve Spurrier hasn't said what changes he plans for next season in D.C.

he means by "restructure, reorganize, regroup," deferring such questions until the end of the season. Such words are usually associated with front office shakeups, an area over which Spurrier has no control. (AP)

Holiday shopping cards sound great, but watch for fees

GIFTS | Like more and more holiday shoppers, Juliette Coulter of Dallas thinks the right gift for many friends and family members is plastic and fits in a wallet.

She's spending $300 this season on gift cards from Target, Old Navy, Starbucks and other stores. It means no worrying, for example, about size or style for a pair of nephews age 9 and 14.

"They have very specific tastes, and I don't want to get them the wrong thing," she said. "I want them to think I'm the cool aunt."

Gift cards are hotter than ever this season, with merchants expected to sell more than $17 billion worth during the holidays, or 8 percent of all business.

Yet as the cards become more familiar, many recipients are grumbling about some headaches associated with them — fees if the cards are not used quickly, problems getting replacements if they are stolen or lost, and questions about what to do with those last few dollars or even cents of credit.

Aware of the issues, some store chains are revising their policies or doing more to educate customers about how to get the most out of gift cards.

Coulter said she doesn't worry about card fees because her recipients use them quickly — which is often the only way to make sure you get full value.

Dennis Fish of Atlanta learned that the hard way.

Fish purchased a $120 gift certificate from a spa for himself and his wife last year. They waited just over a year to use it — and were hit with a 20 percent "reactivation" charge. The card had a one-year expiration period.

"Never will I buy one again until

GUESS NOT: Giving gift cards, like those on display at this Wal-Mart in Little Rock, Ark., ensures recipients get exactly what they want — most of the time.

I know the policies," he said.

Brad Ferris of Washington says gift cards "drive me nuts."

"If you get a $300 card and you only purchase $250, you end up forking out more money to these stores because they don't refund the cash you don't spend," he said.

Besides reactivation fees, some store cards carry a kind of reverse-interest that's charged over time. Bank-issued cards often have an initial charge.

"Consumers are going to find out that their gift cards are not worth as much as they thought they were," said Gail Hillebrand of the consumer advocacy group Consumers Union of U.S. Inc.

Retailers say reactivation and other fees help cover costs to maintain the systems that track card credits, and are fair because the costs are charged only to consumers who delay.

Michael Brown, a retail operations specialist at Kurt Salmon Associates, estimated that 10 percent to 15 percent of the value of the cards are never used.

Hillebrand knows how gift-givers can prevent that.

"Write a check," she advised.

SOUL SEARCHER: At 32, Macy Gray is more comfortable with her odd voice but no less introspective.

Crazy for You

Macy Gray hasn't gotten less weird; she's gotten better

MUSIC | There can be no more potent satisfaction for an artist commonly and frequently tagged as a weirdo than to see your album shoot up the charts and to watch audiences of devoted fans mouthing along with your lyrics.

Weirdos, of course, are rock mainstays. But Macy Gray is considered weird for a rock star. Still, her latest, the aptly titled "The Trouble With Being Myself," blasted up to No. 29 on the R&B charts and re-established her as a musical force to be reckoned with, if an indefinable one. She'll be reminded of how popular she is this Thursday, a welcome solo comeback after David Bowie, for whom she was opening, canceled his East Coast gigs earlier this month.

In 1999, when "neo-soul" was the byword for the music of polite young ladies who like to sit while singing, Macy Gray, an accidental singer from Canton, Ohio, was speaking out "On How Life Is" in her sexy, girlish, menacing grosgrain voice.

That's what happens when you don't — when you can't — sound like anybody else. Gray's raspy pipes made Rod Stewart sound like Mel Torme, and her rainbow of funky-fresh grooves, her self-celebrating style, her confessional songwriting owed more to '70s rock and funk than to the satin-sheet soul of her chart sisters. With sinuous vibes Marvin Gaye would have recognized and uncompromising lyrics even bare-bones folkies might shy away from, Gray has proven herself one of the most fearless and most enjoyable young artists around.

Her reputation, meanwhile, runs from a slightly-out-of-it chick to heavy indulger in herbal relaxants to pure nutball. We don't care; when Gray sings "You are relating to a psychopath," the groove is so deep, it's a pleasure to go under. (EXPRESS)

Second Sight

MUSIC | It's no visit to the retirement home to hear these septuagenarians sing. And hark, these herald angels sure do sing (and dance).

It's a full-gospel throwdown when the Blind Boys of Alabama are led — literally — onstage and then cut loose. From traditional soul-stirrers like "Motherless Child," to originals that are nearly standards 60 years on, to songs by a few of their musical progeny (Curtis Mayfield, Tom Waits, Ben Harper and Funkadelic) — all receive the Blind Boys' blazing jubilee treatment.

Formed at the Talladega Institute for the Deaf and Blind in the 1930s, the group began performing together around age 14. Their first tour was in 1944, in a '39 Buick driven by a couple of deaf classmates. The reception was ecstatic, but exploitative recording contracts kept them living on a shoestring. Still, the sound they championed along with the likes of Mahalia Jackson helped to inspire singers like Aretha Franklin, the Four Tops, Little Richard, Stevie Wonder and others.

Five Blind Boys, give or take a few 70-something "boys," still sing like angels.

Of course, white performers like Elvis, the Rolling Stones and the Beatles eventually dominated the radio with their own takes on that pioneering influence. Though they never stopped performing, the Blind Boys seemed to disappear.

Enter Peter Gabriel, who signed the Blind Boys to his Real World label in the late '90s. Their albums "Spirit of the Century" and "Higher Ground" not only restored their visibility and earned them fair royalties for the first time, they also provided a chance for their musical descendants to give back.

Robert Randolph, Solomon Burke, Aaron Neville and Shelby Lynne are just some of the guests. The Boys' new collection of sacred Christmas songs, "Go Tell It on the Mountain," reveals 70-somethings filled with such fire that it must be divinely inspired. (BOB MASSEY)

JUST AX SANTA: Hey, kids! Looks like Frozy accidentally cut down someone's Christmas tree. Someone's getting coal in his stocking this year.

Egg Nog, Holly & Mayhem

STAGE | What rough beast slouches toward the North Pole to be born? It's Frozy, kids, the Abominable Snowman, and he's serving up great steaming platters of violence and mayhem this holiday season.

Welcome to the twisted minds of Landless Theatre Company, socially stunted jokers who have re-written a holiday classic as a taste-free freak show with horror by the sleighful and parody up the chimney.

"Frozy the Abominable Snowman" sends up science-horror classics with a story of mad scientist Dr. Frozy (Russell Jordan) conscripted by an evil trophy babe (Sarah McKnight) to give her rich husband the deep-freeze treatment.

But the ice man (Chad Allen) cometh alive, and goes on a homicidal spree. This show cannot be recommended for children whose idea of Christmas stage fun is the pastel prancing of "The Nutcracker."

All we know is it's not Christmas unless one of the season's beloved icons goes medieval on some carolers. Oh, and it's a musical, with songs from D.C.'s own Quiz Show Scandals. You'll laugh, you'll cringe; you'll never look at a scarf and carrot the same way again. (EXPRESS)

Energy Crisis

MUSIC | Fuel thought their song "Shimmer" was so good they released it twice.

Perhaps the blunt trauma of repetition is what distinguished Fuel from the pack of monosyllabic post-grunge bands that mined the same sonic territory. Or maybe their videos weren't as lousy as Creed's. Or they had better hair than Live.

Whatever; something worked and their breakthrough album, "Sunburn," went platinum. Now we all share in singer Brett Scallions's and lyricist Carl Bell's personal sufferings.

"Hemorrhage (In My Hands)," Fuel's inescapable 2001 hit, filled every mall, gym and Land Rover with vague distress.

SUPER-PREMIUM FUEL: muscular, monosyllabic post-grunge with really good hair.

They supersized that McHit with "Falls on Me," another anthem of discomfort from their latest album, "Natural Selection." Which is probably not an ironic title, though the critics would suggest otherwise.

If Fuel's albums are any indication, you can expect professional competence when they hit Nation on Sunday night. If you need more daring, yell for them to play "Shimmer" twice. (BOB MASSEY)

WHO WHAT WHERE WHEN WHY

“... Brian DePalma's new film is a valentine to the two directors he loves most: Alfred Hitchcock and Brian DePalma ...

... It looks like a movie, it sounds like a movie, you see it in a movie theater, but it's not a movie. It's like a 2-1/2 hour preview ...

... Other than a distressing lack of quality hair care products, things are fine in Middle Earth ...”

Back to Burlesque

D.C. can’t get enough of that new-wave vaudeville stuff

OUT & ABOUT | We begged Lobster Boy to come back. We were all, “But Lobster Boy, you can’t leave us now; your Lobster Boy Revue was so full of astounding acts, pulchritudinous women and dazzling artistry. If you go, the glitter of hope twinkles and vanishes with you.”

And Lobster Boy was all, “I do not twinkle, bub” and we were all, “Into the pot with you, smart-mouth,” and then it got ugly.

But we’ve since made up, and L.B. is back, an accordion clutched in his claws, a posse of freaks and artistes trailing behind him. He’s your big red host of “Lobster Boy’s Christmas Special,” an old-fashioned burlesque show with song and dance, illusion and comedy, pretty girls and the chimerical hand of fate, on the menu this weekend. With butter sauce.

Kidding, L.B. Sheesh.

Accompanying the (other) guy in red are: Evil Pappy Twin, who vies with Good Pappy Twin for musical supremacy as they rip into screaming ’80s and ’90s headbanging metal on a lute; Sea Monster (talents vague); Dren the Liar, who does stupid and dangerous things

You'll Shoot Your Eye Out

FILM | Quick: How many times do you have to be dared before putting your tongue to a frozen flagpole?

That's right, the risky triple-dog dare is the ne plus ultra of boyhood chest-bumping, as demonstrated with horrible, adorable vividness by Bob Clark's 1983 "A Christmas Story." The movie, based on the boyhood reminiscences of humorist Jean Shepherd, went from cult to cozy and has enshrined in every fan's mind a certain old-fashioned ideal of Christmas: cynical, sentimental, bravura and as curious about dirty words ("... only I didn't say 'fudge,'" as Ralphie woefully admits) as only kids can be.

Peter Billingsley's Ralphie fixes Santa with his most ingratiating smile.

AFI resurrects this shiny bauble and places it lovingly in its most flattering setting — a movie theater. Away from the hustle and bustle of expanded DVDs and the chintzy, interruption-ridden television airings, "A Christmas Story" blossoms on the big screen.

Bring the little ones, but remember that now the evil department-store Santa and his malevolent elves are going to be 10 feet tall.

Weekend Pass | Food

Eat, Drink and All That

HOLIDAY | Ever wonder why you don't like eggnog? Chances are you've been drinking the pre-made stuff from a carton (read: gross) and have never had a chance to taste the real thing. This recipe calls for a cooked egg mixture, which minimizes the chance of salmonella entering the conversation. KIM O'DONNELL

(WASHINGTONPOST.COM)

Chase your eggnog with spicy cardamom cookies.

L.A. TIMES

CARDAMOM SPRITZ COOKIES

1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter, chilled
1/2 cup superfine sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 egg yolks
2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cardamom seeds, crushed using a mortar and pestle
1/4 cup sparkling decorative sugar
1/4 cup chopped pistachio nuts

→ Heat the oven to 375 degrees. Using an electric mixer, cream the butter until smooth. Add the sugar and beat for one minute. Add the vanilla extract and egg yolks and beat an additional minute.
→ Sift together the flour and salt. Spoon the flour mixture into the butter mixture and add the cardamom. Beat on low speed, then increase to medium and mix until the batter is combined.
→ Spoon the dough into a cookie press and press out onto ungreased baking sheets. In a small bowl, combine the sparkling sugar and the pistachio nuts, then sprinkle some on each cookie.

→ Bake just until the edges of the cookies start to turn a pale golden color, about 8 to 10 minutes. Remove the cookies from the baking sheet immediately and cool on a wire rack. The cookies will firm up as they cool. When they are completely cool, store in an airtight container. They may be kept frozen up to two months.

MAKES 5 DOZEN. (L.A. TIMES)

GENUINE EGGNOG

12 eggs
1 cup sugar
4 cups whole milk
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
nutmeg
4-12 ounces alcohol (optional)

→ Separate 12 eggs. Combine the yolks with 1 cup sugar and mix well with a wooden spoon. The mixture will thicken and turn a pale yellow. Set aside.

→ Measure 4 cups whole milk and place in a saucepan over medium heat. As it comes to a simmer (tiny bubbles rising to the surface), spoon out one ladle's worth of milk into the egg mixture and stir constantly. Watch for the rise in temperature in the egg bowl; it should begin to feel warm, which is what you want. This process is called tempering; the objective is to bring the temperature of the egg mixture closer to that of the milk to avoid curdling. If you need to add more ladles of milk to warm the bowl, that's fine.

→ Gradually add the egg mixture to the saucepan and stir over low to medium heat. The mixture will begin to thicken. The goal is a mixture that's approximately 160 degrees and thick enough for a finger streak on the back of your wooden spoon. As you get closer, you may use a whisk, alternating with your spoon, to aerate the mixture. When it has arrived at the desired state, whisk to help bring down the temperature, pour over a strainer and let cool in the bowl in an ice bath.

→ Add vanilla extract (about 1 tablespoon) if desired, and/or grated nutmeg. This is also the time to add anywhere from 4 to 12 ounces of alcohol—including brandy, rum or bourbon. Of course, this is optional, and virgin eggnog is just as delicious.

→ Cover and chill. Serve in small glasses, either straight up or on the rocks. Makes approx. 2 quarts.

SUPERMODELS

Klum Plans Line of Babies

German supermodel HEIDI KLUM is expecting her first child with Flavio Briatore, managing director of Renault's Formula One team, Klum said Tuesday. Klum, 30, and Briatore, 53, have been together for about a year. "I will take a short maternity leave," Klum told reporters after presenting her new fashion collection. (AP)

ACHIEVEMENTS

Ben Keeps Busy

BEN AFFLECK will be the grand marshal at the Daytona 500. The actor and NASCAR fan will begin the Feb. 15 race with the traditional command to the 43-car field: "Gentlemen, start your engines." Affleck is the second movie star in a row to handle grand marshal duties for the race, following John Travolta last year. (AP)

Airport of the Star

Members of legendary American entertainer BOB HOPE's family gathered Wednesday with celebrities and politicians to officially change the name of the Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport to Bob Hope Airport. The comedian had parked his private plane at the airfield since 1985 and embarked from there on many trips to entertain U.S. troops around the world. The airport handles 5 million passengers a year. (AP)

TO THE EDITOR

I FIND IT INTRIGUING that people are opposed to Saddam being put to trial under circumstances where execution is a probable outcome ("Iraqis Eager to Try Saddam," Dec. 16). Such opposition is expected of human rights organizations which oppose the death penalty, but get real! The death penalty is common in most Islamic countries. Do they not realize the Western world will be criticized even more if the tribunal is not held in Iraq and not allowed to carry out punishment as seen fit by the people of Iraq?

—TARA SLIFER
Bowie, Md.

IN JAMES W. PINDELL'S recent Live Online column (Dec. 9), he missed the mark by saying he doesn't know of a general election winner who didn't first win in the New Hampshire primary. I suggest he look back on the election wins of George W. Bush and Bill Clinton. The New Hampshire winners were Sen. John McCain (2000) and Sen. Paul Tsongas (1992).

—DENNIS JOHN LEWIS
Washington, D.C.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Pindell actually did note those exceptions but, due to an editing error, they were left out of the Live Online transcript.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — This can be a rewarding day, once you get past a period of frustration resulting from your own indecision. Make a choice and stick with it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — The demands made on your skills and endurance are likely to surprise you. Prepare yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — You may be nearing a dangerous intersection. Only a close friend will warn you of the coming risk. Listen.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Guests may be more opinionated and more unwilling to follow rules you set down than expected. You're the one who must adjust.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You admire sensitivity in others, but you're not likely to tolerate those who find offense in everything. Be gentle, but don't coddle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Someone may be pushing your buttons in such a way that you are unable to function properly — particularly under pressure.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Things may seem a little artificial and forced; work to return to a more natural and organic manner of doing things.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — A conflict between the simple and the complex is likely to rage on despite your attempts to get things to meet in the middle. Be patient.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — A personal discovery on your part is likely to open many doors for others as well. Career advancement is certainly in the picture at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Now is the time to make your feelings known in domestic surroundings, where you can take advantage of your considerable support group.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Spend some time talking with others — without dictating the course of the conversation. Let someone else pick the topic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — There is little danger that your current progress will slow. You can enjoy a new level of involvement during the evening.

LOTR: 'King'

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

MICHAEL REGINA, editor in chief of TheOneRing.net, the largest Web site for "The Lord of the Rings," was online Wednesday to discuss "The Return of the King," part three of the epic film series that opened Tuesday.

What do you think of these people dressing up and waiting in line for hours to see midnight showings?

Well ... the word fan comes from fanatic, correct? I think it's great to see fans so excited about these films. One of the biggest disappointments of the late-'90s and this decade has been the "Matrix" and "Star Wars" films. Sadly, they have not lived up to the massive hype the fans build it to be. However, it seems "Rings" has worked out well.

Personally, the only time I get dressed in costume is Halloween.

What do you think of the movie's chances at the Oscars next year?

Personally, I think the chances are very good for Peter Jackson to get a best director Oscar. The Academy cannot ignore his huge task in creating these films. As for best picture, the Academy seems to alternate from Hollywood blockbuster to art flick ... so who knows where they'll settle this year?

Will there be a grand finale DVD of some sort that contains all three movies including the extra features or is it safe to go ahead and snag "Towers" now and "King" when it's first released?

I think New Line will be selling the entire box set of all DVDs next year. They've promised us that there will be no "super duper edition" every three years like "Star Wars." The extended editions will be the final editions you will see. If you want to hold on to your money, then wait until late 2004 for this multi-edition DVD set. Something like 24 DVDs, I assume ... huge!
